CLAUDIA HANSBURY COMES TO AID IN SOLVING MURDER

Will Help Solve Mystery in Which She Was Once
Thought Victim

If this night remained a day that the victim in the Bronx murder mystery was not Claudia Elizabeth Hansbury, as established yesterday by an investigation by The Evening World, it was depicted today in Troy. In the office of the Chief of Police there, the former Miss Hansbury, who is now Mrs. William H. Burns, met Mrs. Anna McGovern of No. 132 East One Hundred and Fiftieth Street, who had known her here.

Mrs. McGovern was one of those who thought for a time that the murder victim was Claudia Hansbury. To clear up the tangle about the identification she was taken to Troy today by Detective John Schewering.

This afternoon Schewering reported by telephone to Capt. Wines, in charge of the Bronx detectives, that the women recognized each other at once. The detective also said he was bringing Mrs. Burns to this city to aid in the solution of the mystery.

"The identification of this woman in Troy as the real Claudia Hansbury is final," Capt. Wines said, "but it does not clear Raffaele Picullo, the contractor held as a suspect. A woman has been murdered, and before this mistake in identity was made a prisoner was taken. Irrespective of who the murdered woman is we will hold this prisoner pending the solution of the mystery."

AUNT MISTAKEN IN HER IDENTIFICATION.

Before The Evening World investigation which resulted in the discovery of the woman supposed to be the murder victim there appeared to be no doubt of her identity. Her aunt, Mrs. Christine Carr, of No. 2333 First Avenue, had positively identified the body, as had several others who knew the woman. Then Mrs. Burns's brother declared she was alive, and it was learned yesterday that the woman was living at No. 71 Harrison Place, Troy.

The police were reluctant to admit that the murdered woman was not the person they claimed, and late yesterday they had Mrs. Carr and her husband again look at the body and repeat their identification. Others were called in to again identify the body and among them was Mrs. McGovern, who had been an intimate friend of Claudia Hansbury when she lived in this city. The police insisted that the identification was correct until there came repeated assertions from the woman in Troy that she was Claudia Hansbury.

"We have other lines to work on in this case," Capt. Wines said this afternoon, "and there is the fountain pen still unexplained."

But Picullo in the Bronx jail strongly insisted to-day that he had never owned a fountain pen, and in proof of this he declared that he could not write and would have no use for one. Capt. Wines said that pencils were found in his pocket when he was arrested and detectives are investigating the truth of his own assertion that he is innocent of the crime. The police, however, were not so sure. They were raised as to the identification of the body, Picullo was taken into custody three times, and after twice insisting that he knew the woman in the body, he admitted that the body looked like that of a woman he had known as Claudia. He had visited her, he said, in a flat he hired for her in West One Hundred and Forty-eighth Street.

The mystery of the woman's identity is admitted by the police to be greater than ever, and they are thrown back on the few vague clues they had in the beginning, a slip of paper with the figures "578 W." two keys and her clothing.

PLAYED GOLF ON DECK OF BIG OCEAN LINER

The Ball Had a String to It in Game of the Orduna.

Because of the extreme southern course taken in her efforts to avoid the Cunard liner Orduna, in from Liverpool to-day, ran through exceptionally calm and warm weather during the entire voyage and the trip was enlivened by a golf tournament on the upper deck. Nets were stretched, the ball's flight curbed by a string attached to it, and a regular game went on from early morning until dinner time.

Capt. Thomas McComb Taylor, who is said to be the second best amateur golfer in Scotland, won the championship.

Lady Mackworth, daughter of D. A. Thomas, the Welsh coal king, was on the Orduna and was met by her father, who is at the Waldford here looking over some big coal shipments to England. She is an ardent suffragette and served a month in jail just prior to the breaking out of the war.

Lady Mackworth says that like all the other suffragists she intends to keep quiet until the war is over and then England will see another campaign that will win the vote, especially in view of the work the suffragists have done as nurses.

NEWARK, N. J., April 10.—The Calumet League's latest invasion of the Federal League's territory in the Bronx murder mystery was depicted today in Troy. In the office of the Chief of Police there, the former Miss Hansbury, who is now Mrs. William H. Goal Dealer Abuses Woman Over
Pay, Wounds Husband Twenty
Times and Escapes

(Special to The Evening World)

CHARLES HOPPER returned last evening to his home, No. 141 Ninth Street, Brooklyn, and found his wife, Mary, with a severe wound on her forehead. Mrs. Hopper was telling the man he would have to wait for her husband before receiving her. The dealer did not want to wait and was abusive.

Hopper took up the argument and told the dealer he was insulting Mrs. Hopper. The man then drew a knife and stabbed Hopper twenty times in the abdomen, chest and arm. As Hopper fell unconscious his assistant ran.

Hopper was taken to the Holy Family Hospital. The doctors said he had only a few hours to live. The arrest of the stabber is expected.

ASKS FOR FURS; GETS THEM.

Message Boy Gives Up Package
Worth $400 to Stranger.

Much Metairie, No. 12 Congress Street, Brooklyn, went to work Wednesday as an errand boy for Balch, Price & Co., Fulton and Smith Streets. He was sent to the home of a Mrs. Evans at No. 408 Bedford Avenue, to get a mink coat and a set of furs, valued at $400, to be stored for the summer.

Metairie stopped at another house for furs, and with the two bundles was standing at Bedford Avenue and Fulton Street, waiting for a trolley, when a well-dressed young man approached and said:

"I'm working for the Balch, Price Company. Give me one of the bundles and I'll take it to the store for you."

Metairie handed over the bundle containing the property of Mrs. Evans. A half dozen detectives are trying to find it.

SUNDAY WORLD WANTS WORK WONDERS

WE invite you to come to Aeolian
Hall and hear the Wonderful New Phonograph that
You can Play—

The

AEOLIAN-VOCALION

THE element most needed by the phonograph has been tone-control—some practical method by which you could vary the music—put a little of your own personality into it. Manufacturers have all recognized this need, and in an attempt to meet it have brought out a variety of needles, provided doors, and other mechanical devices for changing tone volume.

Everyone who has ever owned a phonograph realizes the need. Even the finest Records, if always played in the same way, eventually lose much of their original charm. They lack the shades of feeling, the subtle changes in expression with which the great artists themselves always vary their performances.

The Graduala

The Aeolian-Vocation is equipped with a device which provides an absolute control of tone. This device is the Graduala.

The Graduala makes the music of the phonograph your own—you may vary the expression, introduce tone-shading and accents as you choose. You supply the personal element which vitalizes the interpretation—adds the interest of novelty.

And the fascination of thus actually playing—of expressing yourself in music—by means of the phonograph cannot be described. It is almost as though the talent of the artist who made the record were your own. You have a wonderful voice to sing with—an incomparable mastery of violin or 'cello—you lead the orchestra or direct the band—and always with certainty and beautiful results, for you follow always the example and suggestion of a master artist.

The Phonograph Department at Aeolian Hall is the most complete in the city. In addition to a magnificent display of Aeolian-Vocations, a complete stock of the celebrated Columbia Phonographs, and other leading instruments, is carried. Here also are to be found all the famous Columbia and other standard makes of Records. Columbia Grafonolas from $17.50 up. Payments as low as $2 a month.
